Spirituality & Episcopal Identity
All Saints Episcopal Day School was founded by All Saints Episcopal Parish in 1985 as an outreach to the community to serve children of all faiths. Our spirituality program is ingrained in the fabric of our school curriculum and community. While we are not a religious school, the Episcopal values of compassion, inclusivity, and social justice are lived out through ongoing social action, community service, and self-reflection activities.

All Saints is accredited by the New Jersey Association of Independent Schools. All Saints Episcopal Day School does not discriminate on the basis of race, religious tradition, color, gender, national or ethnic origin, or sexual orientation in administration of its educational programs, admission policies and financial aid.

“We are proud to have our children at All Saints as they continue to flourish and grow under the guidance of some of the best mentors and teachers I have ever seen.” – All Saints parent

The Discipline and Integrity to be Successful in School and in Life

At All Saints, education is about more than academic achievement; it is about being prepared to create a rich and meaningful life for oneself. It’s about knowing who you are, where your passions lie and how to pursue your dreams. Students develop the vision, perseverance and determination to use their skills in ways that bring personal fulfillment and success while contributing to the greater good of society.

Responsibility for the Planet and Gratitude for its Beauty

A deep connection to Earth is an integral part of an All Saints education. In order to tackle the challenges facing our planet, children need to develop a deep love and respect for the Earth, and an appreciation for its beauty and diversity. Environmental awareness and stewardship play a central role in our curriculum at every grade level.

A Sense of Spirituality through Social Action and Service

At All Saints, we believe that children are spiritual beings and that a comprehensive education must address the inborn sense of mystery, wonder and awe that is a natural part of the human experience. Students explore the idea that we are all part of something much larger than ourselves and that everything in the universe is connected. Weekly gatherings provide opportunities for the community to come together to learn about a variety of spiritual pathways, different faith traditions, spiritual texts, and concepts such as inner wisdom, gratitude, service and interdependence.

Field trips to a variety of nearby locations, including art and cultural centers in New York City, natural beaches, wildlife centers, and historic landmark sites in the metropolitan area, round out our rigorous and engaging curriculum.
A Sincere Love of Learning
Learning is a joyful way of life for the children and adults who comprise the All Saints community. Students hunger for engaging and authentic learning opportunities and are driven by a sense of purpose and a desire to be one’s best self. While personal achievement is valued, so is a spirit of cooperation, collaboration and teamwork. We strive to be our best because we are inspired by others and because we desire to make our mark in the world. Having knowledge and skill is not enough; at All Saints we seek to develop the growth mindset and critical thinking skills needed for real-world problem-solving in the context of strong personal ethics and sound judgment.

Learning through Experience
Learning comes alive at All Saints through a variety of projects, field trips and student-led presentations. Every grade has one or more milestone projects that frame a significant aspect of the curriculum. For example, Pre-K students develop their skills by running a school-wide “Valentine’s Post Office;” students in Fourth Grade conduct an Action Research project and formally present their findings to the Hoboken City Council; and Eighth Graders engage in a student exchange program with a school in Ecuador, where they are exposed to one of the most bio-diverse locations on the planet. A valued part of our culture involves sharing what we have learned, and students become highly skilled at public speaking and presenting to audiences of all types and sizes.

“Of all the schools we visited, All Saints was the most ‘authentic’. Teachers and staff seemed to be genuinely warm, passionate and invested. This was also the only school where the teachers seemed to have very distinct personalities, each an immediately recognizable individual. When a school embraces and values such uniqueness and offers its teachers the space to express their true selves, it is reassuring that they will most certainly, and at the very least, do the same for their students.” –All Saints parent
